

ASIAN STUDIES

Specializes in Academic

The Journal of the Burma Research Society (JBRS) played a vital role in academic research by being the first journal dedicated to Burma Studies. With 59 volumes spanning 70 years, it featured contributions from 377 authors on diverse subjects related to Burma, making it a cornerstone in scholarly research.

About

The Journal of the Burma Research Society (JBRS) was a pioneering academic journal on Burma Studies, published from 1911 for 70 years. It featured 59 volumes, 1,300 articles by 377 authors, photos, graphs, maps, and lively scholarly discourse.

Categories and Subjects

The Journal of the Burma Research Society covered a wide range of subjects related to Burma, including art, science, literature, culture, history, and neighboring countries. It featured diverse topics such as anthropology, archaeology, linguistics, political science, and sociology, contributing to scholarly research on Burma.

VIEW TITLES