

SCIENCE, ENGINEERING AND TECHNOLOGY

Specializes in Academic

The International Society of Automation (ISA) plays a significant role in academia by setting industry standards, certifying professionals, and providing educational resources in the field of automation. Their focus on education, certification, and technical publications contributes to the advancement of knowledge and skills in automation studies.

Categories and Subjects

The International Society of Automation (ISA) covers a diverse range of subjects and categories in the field of automation, including industrial control systems, process automation, cybersecurity, instrumentation, robotics, and safety systems. ISA's offerings cater to professionals and students interested in automation technology and practices.

International Society of Automation
Setting the Standard for Automation™

About

The International Society of Automation (ISA), established in 1945 at Research Triangle Park, North Carolina, is a leading organization in automation. It sets industry standards, certifies professionals, offers education, publishes technical resources, and hosts events, aiming to be the global automation standard.

VIEW TITLES

